Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 16 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Bright and rather mild. Perhaps showers later.

Today:
Bright and breezy, with sunny spells today. A risk of the odd light afternoon shower, perhaps briefly heavy in the south. Remaining mild. A dry and largely clear evening. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Any showers clearing early this evening, becoming largely dry with patchy cloud overnight. A chance of the odd patch of grass frost. Becoming cloudy with outbreaks of rain by dawn. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Wednesday:
Another mild and murky start on Wednesday, with rain and cloud clearing to the east. Some brightness is possible before further cloud and rain arrive from the southwest by evening. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Remaining rather changeable and often windy with rain possible each day. Bright or sunny interludes remain likely. Mild by day but chilly on Thursday night with patchy frosts possible.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.